Henry M. Furman, the Grand Old Roman, has filed to succeed himself as presiding judge of the State Criminal Court of Appeals. He deserves to be returned without opposition.—Miami Record-Herald.

There will probably be no special celebration of the Glorious Fourth at Ada as the town will have its hands full in preparing for the reunion. Plenty of time to celebrate the Fourth in years when there is no reunion, but this reunion will be worth more than half a dozen celebrations.

It's an easy matter to get into the lime light if one makes the most of his opportunity. Disney, Victor and DeLo have never been heard of outside of Oklahoma until they enlisted things at Chicago with a little fight. Wasn't much of a fight, either, just one lick around, but every paper in the United States has had something to say about it. Being the first battle it naturally attracted attention.

In response to the request of the sanitary committee of the Federated Mothers' Clubs Mayor Chapman has designated tomorrow as clean up day and it is now up to the citizens to make good by giving their premises a thorough cleaning. Even about the best kept places a great deal of rubbish will accumulate and occasionally it becomes necessary to call attention to it and have things cleaned up. money spent for this purpose is well invested and yields handsome dividends in the way of adding to the attractiveness of a place and in making it more healthful. Keep the good work going.

A Kansas publisher once hit upon a plan to induce immigration which could be used to advantage by many Texas communities. His idea was to publish the pictures of the pretty girls of his town which would make desirable young men want to live there.—Fort Worth Record.

That might work in Kansas, but it would bankrupt the Ada News to try such a plan, for it would mean the expense of having half-tones made of the entire eligible feminine population of the city. Besides the guys would be so badly mixed up in trying to decide the relative merits of each that they would not know where to head in.

UNCERTAINTY PREVAILS.

Press dispatches indicate that the situation at Chicago is so badly mixed that the most astute political forecaster confesses himself utterly at sea. Both sides are claiming victory, but it will remain for the convention to be organized before any one can be certain just where the two leaders stand. Both sides realize that it is a battle to the death and that the defeated host will be utterly exterminated. Roosevelt is fighting for his own aggrandizement, determined to win or wreck everything about him. Like Samson of old, if conquered, he will try to pull down the temple on the heads of his enemies even though he must die among them. The Taft faction is fighting with grim determination to forever crush the militant colonel, realizing that if he wins the leaders will be forced into oblivion to make place for the victors. Their influence will be forever dead and they will fight to the last ditch as men will when defeat means annihilation.

This battle has almost caused the public to lose sight of the democratic convention which meets a week from tomorrow, but it is a foregone conclusion that it will be a very tame affair compared with the combat at Chicago. Only a few contests are to be settled by the national committee, and although it will probably require several ballots to settle the nomination, there is no reason to believe there will be many sore spots when the convention adjourns.

BOTH SIDES CLAIM VICTORY

Chicago, June 16.—Another day of conferences, caucuses and counting of delegates brought no solution to the presidential tangle confronting the republican national convention tonight.

During the day the city rang with rumors that a break had come and that a stampede of Southern delegates to Col. Roosevelt had begun. The Roosevelt headquarters had begun public letters, bearing the names of five delegates from Georgia and five from Mississippi, heretofore counted solidly in the Taft column, declaring themselves for Col. Roosevelt as the only hope of the party. Earlier in the day Timothy Woodruff of New York had announced that he had given Col. Roosevelt assurance of his support.

These statements for a time threw the Taft headquarters into something of a panic. Members of the Georgia and Mississippi delegations were hastily summoned, and there was a return of composure when it was learned that four of the five Georgia delegates who had supposedly signed the letter to Col. Roosevelt had not yet reached the city. Later the Taft headquarters claimed to have telegrams from these delegates denying that they had deserted the President.

L. B. Moseley, National committeeman from Mississippi and Chairman of the state delegation declared tonight that two delegates from that state had been expected to disregard their instructions and vote for Col. Roosevelt. He did not believe any more would change.

After these conferences, the Taft managers issued a statement decrying the Roosevelt claims of accessions and asserting that only Charles Banks, one of the negro delegates from Mississippi, and Timothy Woodruff of Brooklyn, had deserted to the Colonel.

"We've got them coming," he exclaimed. "We have lots more of them to tell you about, but we don't want too much excitement in one day. Tomorrow we will give you more news of Taft delegates coming over to our side."

"The situation tonight is absolutely unchanged," said Mr. McKinley, director of the Taft headquarters. "Mr. Roosevelt has been sending for delegates who are opposed to his nomination and has endeavored to persuade them to come over to his standards. This work has been a failure, although claims have been made all day to the contrary."

All members of the Eastern Star are requested to attend the meeting tonight at 8:30. The grand matron will be present.

"The Hardware Man"

Historic Blackguards

By Albert Payson Terhune

Francois Villon—France's "Gutter Genius"

THIS is the story of a man who won immortal fame, and yet whose real name is not known; a man whose renown has endured for nearly five centuries, yet much of whose life is shrouded in mystery. It is the story of an angel-devil, an inspired blackguard, a slum-hero, a pluck-pooet, a thief and murderer whose poetical genius was scarce short of sublime.

In the low taverns of Paris, about the middle of the fifteenth century, the riff-raff of the local underworld raised for themselves an idol, in the shape of a brilliant youth of high education, who preferred to choose his chums from the sordid criminal class rather than from among his equals. He fought, stole, caroused and killed with ruffians, then wrote wondrous poems that were so musical that even his scottish comrades loved them. The slang of the Thieves' Kitchen was his. So was a flow of the most beautiful language known to man.

This youth was variously known by a string of aliases. Among these names were Corbier, Piton, De Montcorbier, Des Leges, Corbeul and Francois Villon. Which, if any, of the names was really his own is uncertain. It was almost surely not "Villon." Yet by that alone he is known to history. Some say he borrowed the name "Villon" from his rich guardian, Guillaume de Villon. Others claim that it was merely a nickname, and that it was whimsically chosen by him because it was a French term for "crook," or "blackguard."

Villon had wealthy, influential friends. First and last, he needed all their influence and appropriated not a little of their wealth. His earliest known clash with the law was in 1456, when he was twenty-four years old. He was at that time a college graduate and a master of arts. Returning from a drunken revel one night he met a priest. A quarrel ensued and Villon stabbed the priest to death. Then he fled to some kindly shelter in the slums where the law's grip could not reach him, and hid among his criminal admirers until family influence could win a pardon for him.

A year or two later he was in trouble again. This time it was a tavern brawl. Villon did not figure very favorably in the affair. In fact, after a severe beating he ran away from Paris; more to avoid ridicule than to escape punishment. In the early spring of 1456 he became a student at the College of Navarre, near Angers, France. A few weeks later the treasure chest in the college chapel was robbed. A band of student thieves was arrested. One of them confessed that Villon was the ringleader of the gang who had broken into the chapel, and that the poet was even then planning new robberies.

Villon was put to the torture and then sentenced to be hanged. As he lay in prison, waiting for execution, he wrote one of his greatest poems; a grim, wonderful bit of verse, entitled, "Ballade of the Hanged." Again his friends' influence, coupled with his own wit, came to the poet's aid. His death sentence was commuted to banishment.

Villon then drifted from one European capital to another; sometimes living in doubtful fashion by his wits, sometimes hobnobbing with such princes and nobles as could appreciate his rare genius. Of his life during these wanderings little is known. But, four years later, he was cast into prison once more. This time, it is said, for the crime of sacrilege. He spent the summer of 1461 in a cell, but was set free in a general jail delivery in October of that year.

His old spirit of wild, reckless adventure seemed gone. Soon afterward he wrote his famous "Grand Testament," a work that breathes of weariness, regret and utter despondency. Broken by prison and by dissipation, he is said to have died of consumption at the age of thirty. (One or two historians believe he lived to be an old man; but, from his thirtieth year no record of him can be found.)

Villon's poetic genius stands out like a gem in a mire. The strange twist of brain that made him a criminal also enabled him to write such verse as no man of his time had attempted. His poetry has served as example for many a later bard and has found hosts of—usually unsuccessful—imitators.

Of the man himself, nothing good can be said. His writings live in spite of his personal career.

The Reason.
"Hamington Fatter says he enjoys playing to matinee audiences much more than night audiences."
"I guess it's safer."
"How is that?"
"Matinee audiences are composed largely of women, and women can't throw straight."

Why not take the youngsters to the seashore?

The little ones will enjoy it hugely and the out-door life, sunshine and salt air will make them sturdy and strong. Try it this year.

A GOOD JOB OF BUILDING

The two houses of S. C. Yeagran on East Main street are nearing completion, and from a personal inspection of same the News reporter can say that they are a model of convenience as well as artistically arranged. C. F. Brashears, who is the architect and builder of the houses, is a man who knows his business and who takes special pride in good work, and who is giving his customer a fine job.

The two houses will each have five rooms, a bath and commodious porch. They are so well arranged that every available inch of space is utilized to the best possible advantage, even to a small wall closet for the bath linen. The two main rooms are separated by a colonnade. The interior is plastered and will be given an oak finish.

PREPARING TO SHIP MANY CARS OF FRUIT

Unless some untoward event like a hail storm happens, it is certain that the fruit crop of Pontotoc county will be the largest on record. During the past five or six years enterprising farmers have been planting trees and thousands of these are just now beginning to bear well. George Frierson, secretary of the fruit growers association, estimates that from 125 to 150 cars will be shipped from here. It is also certain that a considerable quantity of peaches will go from Tupelo. The A. R. T. Co. has already closed a deal with the Ada Ice and Cold Storage Co. to ice the cars going from here and Tupelo, and to receive much more on route from Texas.

His Face Not His Fortune.

M. Durand de Belefond de Gournay, who a few months ago startled the simple folk of Outances by appearing in a brilliant uniform covered with decorations and managed to swindle the local tradespeople of hundreds of pounds, cut a sorry figure when he appeared for trial at the assize court.

His only defense is that he swindled because he wished to create an impression on a woman with whom he was in love. The judge replied: "Don't talk to me of making an impression on the fair sex; you are far too ugly," and then sentenced him to six years' imprisonment.—Paris correspondent London Daily Mail.

One of the most exciting and blood stirring dramas ever made for the moving picture stage will be shown this evening at the Majestic. Its title is "A Beast at Bay." A convict escapes and forces a young lady to take him in her auto and make a mad dash for liberty. Then follows a hot chase in another auto and a locomotive. This is a reproduction of a real occurrence. "The White Hope" is the funniest comedy seen in months.
